About the Conference

The field of aging and gerontology is a fascinating mix of such areas as medicine, psychology, social science, public health, and numerous others. As a result, this discipline is as dynamic as it gets – there is always a new challenge, a new technique, a new angle, or an unexpected finding to look into.

Recognizing and promoting the inherent dignity of people at all ages represents a foundational goal shared by societies around the world. The desire to identify meaning and value in life underpins inquiries into law and politics, religion and the arts, and it guides the resolution of ethical questions associated with scientific inquiry and resulting innovations. As medical science, public health and technology continue to advance, so lives have grown progressively longer. Increasingly, this leads to new questions regarding the kind of lives we will experience as we grow older. While advances in science and medicine increase longevity, what innovative technologies are emerging that address the changing needs faced by an aging world needs probing.

Researchers, scientists, and social workers will gather at IIIT Jabalpur to discuss these questions and many other similar topics.

Some of the core areas that will come for discussion in the conference are:

- Aging & Rehabilitation
- Aging & Rejuvenation
- Aging and Geriatrics
- Aging and Mental Disorders
- Aging and Social Aspects
- Aging Care Management
- Aging in Literature
- Cognitive Decline
- Dementia and Ageing
- Elder Abuse, Law and Rights
- Loneliness and Social Isolation
- Geriatric Care policy of India
